

WE are pleased to notice the arrival home of Mr. PARDON BROWN and his son Mr. JOSHUA C. BROWN of Middletown. They left here last March, taking the steamer from New York and arrived in Nevada Territory via California in one month. Mr. BROWN has two sons in that part of the Territory known as Steamboat Valley, who are pursuing the life of farmers with much success. He spent six months in the Territory and was much pleased with the climate and rapid growth of that far off portion of our Republic. Emigration is pouring into the Territory from California and towns are springing up as by magic all over this region, many attracted thither by the rich mines of silver which have been discovered in the Virginia mountains. Mr. BROWN and his son started from Steamboat Valley, Washoe county, on the 16th of September, with two horses and a wagon intending to reach the States overland, although such an attempt had never been previously made. They traveled by day and encamped at night, meeting but few people on the way, in one instance seventy-five miles were made without meeting a single person. In various places along the route they passed the localities where a number of mail carriers and emigrants had been massacred by the Indians. The places were easily identified by the broken wagons and skeletons of horses which still lay unburied. Their journey was without scarcely an incident to break the monotony, and on the 5th of November, they arrived at Atchison, on the Missouri river where they left their horses, &c., having traveled more than two thousand miles in fifty days including eight days stoppage on the route. By stage they proceeded to St. Joseph and then by railroad arrived at Buffalo on Sunday, arriving home on Monday evening.

Mr. JOSHUA C. BROWN will soon return to the Territory for the sixth time. His first visit was in 1851 when he went out and returned by water, his object being to see what advantages were to be found. He then made four overland trips driving stock each time, and returning by water. He will now take a drove of Northern horses and return with California horses, the former being of a much larger breed than the latter.
